

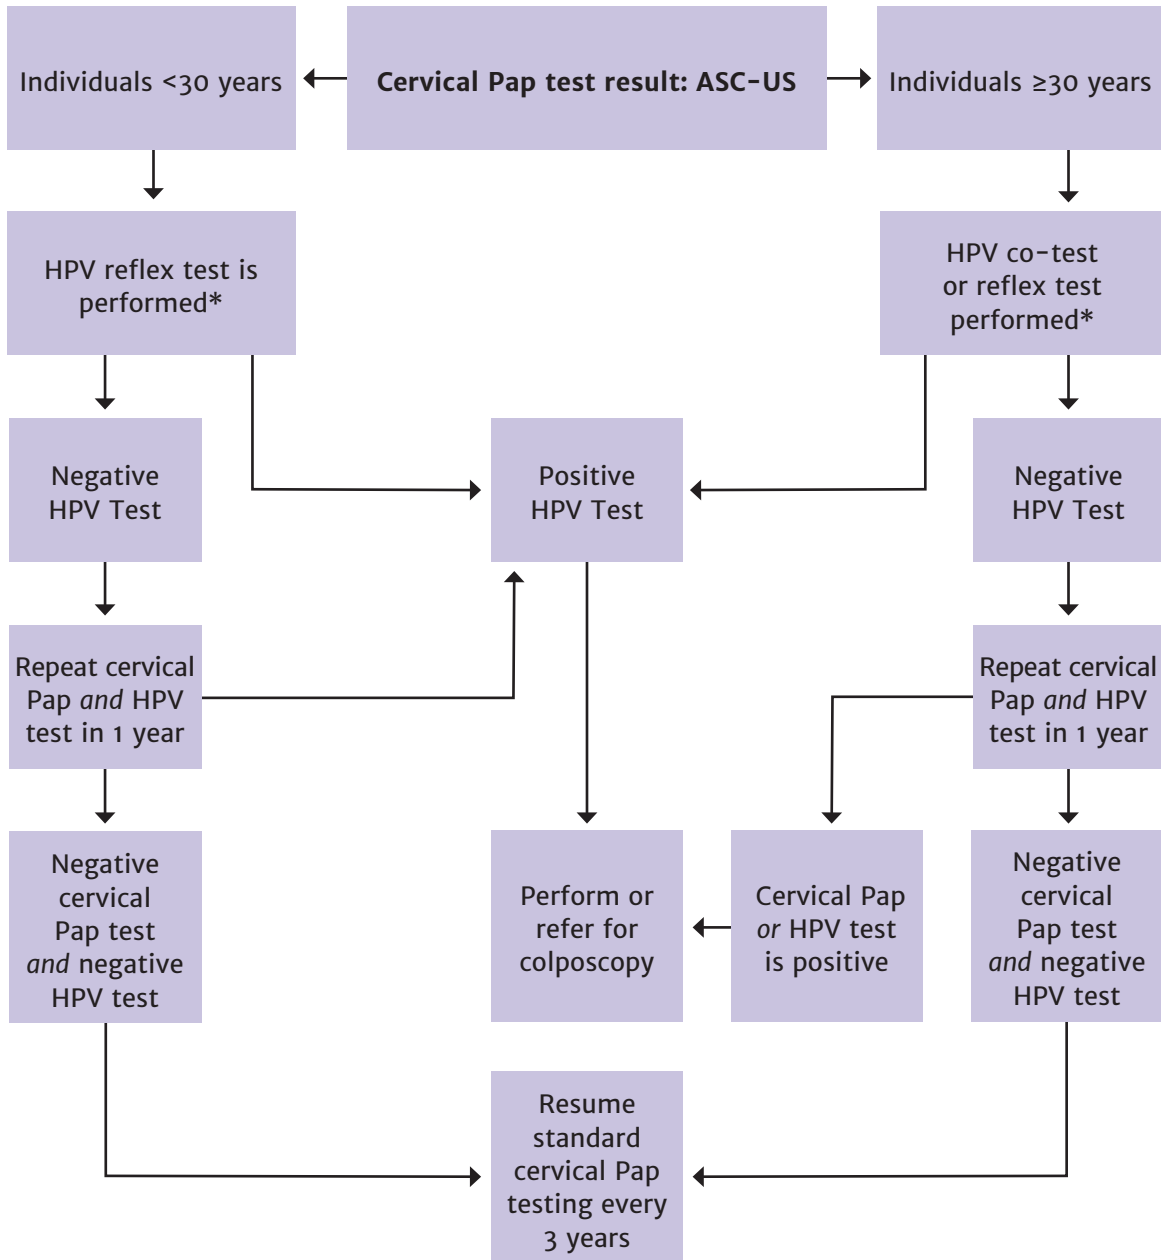

FIGURE 1. Follow-Up for Cervical Pap Test Result Atypical Squamous Cells of Undetermined Significance (ASC-US) in Individuals with HIV Infection

HPV co-testing versus reflex testing: HPV co-testing is routinely performed at the same time as a cervical Pap test in individuals 30 years or older. HPV reflex testing is performed in response to an abnormal cervical Pap test result in individuals younger than 30 years, and in individuals 30 years or older who did not receive an HPV co-test at the time of their cervical Pap test.
